5 Things Burglars Look at When Casing Your Home

1. Enticing Trash

Discarded boxes and bags from all your big-ticket purchases are like advertisements to burglars of the valuables inside your home. Prevent thieves from getting as excited over your new TV as you are by keeping this type of garbage inside until trash pickup day.

2. Overflowing Mailbox

Piles of mail are a sign that you're out of town and primed for a burglary. If you're going away for a while, use the USPS's Request Hold Mail service to stop delivery while you're gone. For shorter periods, a neighbor will likely be glad to pick up your deliveries.

3. Visible Interiors

You don't want burglars to get a peek at all the goodies you have inside your home, so shut the curtains, pull the shades, put a giant houseplant in front of a street-facing window – do whatever you have to do to keep unwanted eyes out.

4. Empty House

Encountering the resident is way more than most burglars are bargaining for. If they think you're in the house, they're staying out of it, so make it look like someone's home by turning on a light or two and even leaving on a TV or radio to make some noise. For prolonged periods away, you can use electronic timers to turn them on and off automatically.

5. A Nonexistent Alarm System

They take a bit of financial investment, but a quality alarm system is a huge burglar deterrent, and a necessary one if you live in a high-crime neighborhood. Do your research and pick a reputable alarm company and consider high-tech options, such as alarms with a camera that allow you to monitor your home from anywhere. Even if you cannot afford an alarm, having a sign in front of your home can help.
